

Frisches

Electronic Press Kit

Munich rock with flute, riffs, shadows, and sharp hooks

Frisches builds guitar-led rock around melodic flute lines, cinematic turns, and a rhythm section that keeps the songs taut and physical. The band draws from classic-rock drama and 60s/70s songwriting instinct without losing the immediacy of a contemporary live act. Current material from Tales From The Cellar moves between tension, character, and release with a clear visual identity already strong enough for booking, editorial use, and promotional features.

Quick Take

Frisches is a four-piece band from Munich shaped by guitar drive, vocal and flute interplay, and a rhythm section that plays with weight rather than excess. The project works best when presented as both a sonic and visual act: dark surfaces, warm metallic accents, intimate rehearsal energy, and songs that feel staged without becoming theatrical. The current release, Tales From The Cellar, gives journalists and bookers an easy entry point: a tight set of character-rich songs, a recognisable line-up, and enough visual material to support listings, features, previews, and social promotion.

Line-up

Cami on vocals and flute, Edgar on guitar and backing vocals, Tobi on bass, and Steff on drums.

Featured Media

Track	Why it matters
Misled	Opening statement from Tales From The Cellar ; compact, melodic, and immediate enough for a first listen.
Tears Of Joyful Despair	A concise showcase of the band's tension-and-release instinct and arrangement detail.
Witch Hunting	The clearest crossover pick for both editorial pitching and visual discovery because the track and the video reinforce each other.

Video focus

The clearest visual entry point is the official Witch Hunting video. For wider browsing, direct press and promoters to the YouTube channel, where the band's moving-image material is collected in one place.

Digital presence

The official website carries the band's main visual world, while Instagram supports current imagery and activity. For direct follow-up, write to the band by email.
